Second round: video call them through wechat and ask them to elaborate on the top 6 factors	Yanni		- want to know about the average house price in the area, so that she can compare it with other factors to see whether the house price is cost-effective			Prefer to live in a city with fewer people because it is quieter and has less traffic. Does not have a concept of the number of people in the U.S. cities, so she wants me to provide a scale to decide whether the city is small or big compared to the others.		She has 2 middle schoolers at home, and her main goal to come to the U.S. is to provide a better education for them. when she is picking high schools for her children, she will probably look at the ranking of the school, and the student-faculty ratio. She believes that the smaller the ratio is, the better the education is provided.	City safety is one of the top factors that she is concerning. She does not want to live in a place with a lot of crime cases.			She is from the South part of China, so she prefers to live in a warmer place. If needs to move to a city in LA county, she wants to avoid living by the beach or the mountain area because those places are probably pretty cold.		She is not very good at cooking and does not want to eat burgers for every meal. She wants to live in a city will a lot of Chinese restaurants around.
	Zecheng		- doesn't know much about the market price of houses in the U.S. - would appreciate if I provide the average house price of all the cities for him to compare			wants to live in a city with more people because he is afraid of living lonely in a area, and if something happens. no one can help him.			Although he really likes the downtown LA vibe, he prefers to settle in a safer place with less crime rate so that he can wake up in the morning peacefully but not sleep peacefully forever.			his only requirement for weather is that the place does not snow in the winter, because he is tired of wiping out the snow in front of his door and on the car every day in the morning in Dongbei(very North of China)		Number 1 factor for him to consider. He said would not live happily if there were no authentic Chinese food around.
	oyjz		she does not have an exact budget for the house, but if she knows the average house price of each city, she will choose the cities that have average price in the middle third. since she thinks that the cities with cheap houses might not be safe, and there might be some negative factors that causing the low price.			she thinks the amount of people in the city is important because she is concerned that if the city is too crowded, she have to wait in line for a long time in the grocery store.		She wants her son to go to a high school with fewer Asian. It is because she wants him to study in an environment that speaks English the majority of the time. She is afraid that he will always speak Chinese if his son meets too many new Chinese immigrants, which does not help with his English communication skills.	"Safety is definitely my first factor to care about, nothing is more important than my life. I don't want to have my wallet and passport to be stolen on the street, and I will be desperate"			She prefers to live in a relatively warmer place because she does not want to spend too much money on the air conditioning, and doesn't want to wake up mid-night because it is too cold.		She does not really care about how many Chinese restaurants are around since she can cook Chinese food, and going out for a meal is costly. She would prefer if the area had less Chinese food, because she believes this indicates that there are fewer Chinese people around, and her family can practice speaking more English in this environment.
